

No More A Child

By Lauren E. McKinney

October 2004

*It was not so long ago,
That she was born.
A frolicking child,
Who was the light of her home.
But she grew quickly,
And with no regrets.
Not looking backward,
But forward to the best.
There came a day,
With thirteen candles on her cake,
And everything seemed to change so fast.
Her life, it seemed like constant heartache!*

*No more a child!
No more a babe!
A girl you stand,
So now be brave.
There's a world so dark,
So full of sin,
Waiting for you to shine out from within.*

*A hand it reached down
From above.
So full of mercy,
So full of love!
She took the hand
She grasped it tight,
And it guided her safely
Through the night.*
